YOU RUN A SCALE-UP, €10M+ RAISED

You raised to move faster. Sometimes the shortest path is to buy.

Stan, your AI Corporate Developer, reviews every company on your market every night, keeps the startups that would genuinely speed up your roadmap, your expansion or your hiring, and writes down why he discarded the rest. You keep the one job that matters: deciding. No corp dev team, no pulling your CFO off reporting.

Fictional example, to show the format

YOUR WEEK

Your round promised acquisitions. Nobody is on it.

No corp dev team, and your CFO is buried in reporting. So you do the searching yourself, between two product reviews.

Monday, 9:30 am

Build or buy, again

The product review stalls on the same feature: nine months of engineering, or a startup that has already built it. Everyone is sure one exists. Nobody knows which.

Tuesday, 6 pm

The founder seeking a soft landing

A founder messages you on LinkedIn: six months of runway left, open to "joining forces". Strong team, maybe. But you have nothing to compare them with.

Thursday, 7:45 am

Your competitor's announcement

Your competitor, who raised around the same time as you, announces it has bought a German player. The very country you were aiming for next year. You find out on LinkedIn, like everyone else.

Quarterly board

"What about acquisitions?"

Your investors reread the fundraising plan and its "acquisitions" line. You have two names and a conviction. Not a pipeline.

A TYPICAL WEEK

From your whole market to 1 to 3 decisions

YOUR MARKET	STAN	US	YOU
~3,000	~245	~15	1 to 3
relevant companies, and new startups every day	screened every week, ~15 kept	analysed and checked, with a memo	decisions a week: YES or NO

Averages measured across our first 10 clients: Stan eliminates 94% of the work and covers the existing market in about 3 months.

WHAT IS AT STAKE

Your competitors raised too. The edge goes to whoever sees the targets first.

01

The best startups are bought between two rounds.

When a round drags on, when cash runs tight, when a founder burns out. Whoever has followed the startup for a year talks to the founder directly; whoever waits for the call arrives alongside funds and your competitors.

02

Building in-house costs months your competitors won't wait for.

Every feature built in-house ties up your best engineers for quarters. Before you decide, you need to know what already exists, who built it and how far along they are.

03

A brilliant startup is not necessarily a good acquisition.

An acquisition is judged by what it brings to your business: roadmap, clients, countries, talent. And by how its people and its technology will fit into yours. That is the reasoning Stan applies to every company.

HOW PROPLACE ANSWERS

What Stan does for you, every night

On the left, what you need. In the middle, Stan's work. On the right, what you get.

WHAT YOU NEED →	WHAT STAN DOES →	WHAT YOU GET
Know who already built what you plan	He derives your criteria from your website, then queries 22 sourcing engines: fundraises, hiring, GitHub, press, new websites.	✓ A map of your market that fills in every day: about 3,000 relevant companies on average.
Only look at what matters	He screens every company against your strategy: MATCH or NO MATCH, with a written reason for every company he discards.	✓ 1 to 3 decisions a week, each with its memo. Not endless profiles.
Defend the deal to your board	He sizes the synergies (revenue, cost, structural, defensive) over five years and names integration risks in a detailed memo.	✓ A reasoned case for your board, your investors and your CFO.
Talk to the founder first	For every target you validate, he drafts the message to its founder and tracks the follow-ups.	✓ A CEO-to-CEO conversation, before a banker runs a process.
Get all the way to closing	He prepares the NDA and letter of intent, then a due diligence checklist and a 100-day plan.	✓ One thread all the way to team integration, with your lawyers and auditors.

YOUR MODE: STRATEGIC ACQUIRER

What Stan looks at for you

Stan is not looking for "hot startups". He is looking for the ones that would be worth more with you than anywhere else.

Product and roadmap
The piece of your roadmap a startup has already built, and the months it would save you.

New market
A country or segment you are not in yet, through a local player that already has clients there.

Clients and cross-selling
How much your client bases overlap, and what each side could sell to the other in year one.

Realistic size and structure
A target your runway can absorb, even when the deal mixes cash, shares and earn-out.

Team and talent
The acqui-hire: a team it would take you years to hire.

Tech and culture fit
Stack, architecture, how each team ships and decides: what will integrate fast, and what will grind.

WHAT YOU GET

Decisions, not lists

The instant memo
For every company kept: what it does, what it brings to your roadmap, the verdict.

The detailed investment memo
Synergies from year 1 to year 5, integration risks and the questions to ask the founder.

The Monday review
Your pending decisions, Stan's, and the rounds and deals in your market and among your competitors.

The outreach message
Written for the target's founder, with follow-ups tracked.

NDA and letter of intent
Prepared from the file, for your lawyers to approve.

The 100-day plan
Integration and deal commitments turned into actions, owners and deadlines.
